Lean in.

If you've been listening, this phrase can't be missed in current media and conversations across the nation. My recent search on twitter of #leanin resulted in dozens of hits. What is all the fuss about?

The "lean in" discussion began with a book with that title authored by Sheryl Sandburg, Facebook's CFO. Throughout its 172 pages, Sandburg discusses the sad-but-true fact that the CEOs of only 21 Fortune 500 companies are women. If women want to change this, Sandburg asserts that women have to make changes. She urges women to “sit at the table” and lean in, communicating our belief in our own abilities and potential. We all know that, generally speaking, women tend to attribute success to others, while men give themselves credit for their achievements.

In 2010, I was lucky enough to interview the former general counsel for Shell Oil, Cathy Lamboley, who provided me with five tips for success in business. Here is her advice: (1) Make a self-assessment, (2) Take risks, (3) Take a stand, (4) Take a hand, and (5) take credit.

Lamboley told me when she began as an attorney at Shell Oil, she believed her hard work and results would speak for themselves in proving her value in the male-dominated oil industry of the 1970s. What Lamboley soon learned was that hard work and a solid work product, while important, are not enough. Consistent with Sandburg and equally as impressive in her business triumphs, Lamboley is the one who taught me to take credit, a tool I believe helps me in both gaining client confidences and in performance reviews.

Additionally, Sandburg repeats Lamboley’s message about taking risks in your career and not shying away from taking risks in standing up for what you believe it. Notably, our EWOTY speaker, Rhonda Shear —owner of a global business that generates more than $70 million per year—also said that to be successful in business, we must be willing to take risks.

Some have criticized Sandburg’s book, while others hail its message. While even Sandburg recognizes that her pedigree provides her with opportunities not necessarily available to other women, it doesn’t mean we should discount the message: that successful women consistently take credit and take risks. These are tools we all should employ.

Even if you disagree with Sandburg’s book, one positive result of it is clear to me: people are talking about women in leadership positions achieving equal representation with their male counterparts.

A. Kovachevich, United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, and as a teaching assistant for the Legal Research and Writing and Appellate Advocacy courses.

Melisa has also published articles in the Tampa Bay Business Journal and The Woman Advocate, a publication by the American Bar Association, and presented client seminars to on topics including “Collateral Sources and Set-Offs in Florida,” “Medicare Updates,” and “Recent Updates to Premises Liability Law in Florida.”

EWOTY

2013 Exceptional Woman of the Year
Tonja M. Brickhouse

Tonja Brickhouse was selected from a field of nine finalists as NEW’s 2013 Exceptional Woman of the Year. Appointed in 2008 as director of the City of Tampa Department of Solid Waste & Environmental Program Management, Ms. Brickhouse is the first woman to hold that position. She went into service with the Air Force as a young mother in 1982, after earning a dual degree in economics and psychology from the University of Virginia. By the time of her retirement from active duty in 2007, she had become the first African-American chief of the air transportation division and earned the rank of colonel. During her years in the military, which included being stationed at the Pentagon, in Germany, and at MacDill AFB, she completed a master’s degree in public education at Troy University. Her vision for the city’s solid waste and environmental program is simple: to create a dynamic team of professionals recognized as the premier leaders in industry. Totally committed to serving our nation and community, she serves as a member of various boards, associations, and organizations and is a highly engaged community leader.

This year’s other worthy EWOTY candidates were:

- Joni Adams, owner and CEO of Refurbished Office Furniture and owner of Peak Form 360, serves on the board of the CEO Council. She holds a bachelor of science degree in accounting from USF and a master’s in industrial and organizational psychology from The Chicago School of Professional Psychology.
- Susan Blackburn is regional executive for Sabadell United Bank, overseeing the company’s growth strategy along the west coast of Florida. Prior to joining Sabadell, Ms. Blackburn spent 16 years with Synovus Bank, serving as president of the Tampa Bay market, and held senior leadership roles during her previous 20 years with Bank of America. She currently serves as advisory board chair of

2013 Scholarship Recipients

NEW had the great pleasure of providing four deserving women a scholarship of $1,000 at the March EWOTY program. Congratulations to:

- Heather Shell—Heather is a graduate student at the University of South Florida currently pursuing her master's degree in global health humanitarian assistance and disaster aid. For the past six years, Heather has been a case manager at Big Brothers Big Sisters of Tampa Bay. Before that, she was stationed on a remote island in Fiji as a member of the United States Peace Corp, helping build the first computer school for the rural population.
- Milora Morley—Milora is enrolled as a public health major at USF, where she also works part-time in the wellness center. Milora is dedicated to her community, and in 2010 after the earthquake in Haiti, began a charity named "Blood Bonds Chains of Hope." Its mission is to fortify, support, and improve the lives of families. Upon completion of her undergraduate degree, Milora plans to earn a master's in public health in epidemiology.
- Becca Garger—Becca is pursuing a master's degree in accounting at the USF and is employed as an audit intern at Warren Averett Pender Newkirk. After obtaining her master's degree, Becca plans to sit for the CPA exam and begin her career as certified public accountant.
- Taylor Greene—Taylor is enrolled at the University of Tampa in pursuit of a master's degree in Special Thanks!

From Kristi Campbell, EWOTY committee chair:

Thank you! Thank you! Thank you! EWOTY was such a great event with 125 people in attendance! The committee members—Karen Koch, Shirley Drake, Karen Gangel, Jodi Perez, Michelle Sanchez and Samantha Bond—worked so hard and organized an event of sheer enjoyment. Guest speaker Rhonda Shear added spice, EWOTY winner Tonja Brickhouse added grace, and the four scholarship winners—Becca Garger, Taylor Greene, Milora Morley, Heather Shell—who each received $1,000, added gratitude. I am honored to have chaired such a worthwhile event for the second year, knowing our efforts will trickle throughout community for many more years.

Thanks also go to the sponsors and members who made generous donations to the EWOTY raffle, to the great pleasure of the recipients who won them:

- Color Analysis, donated by Lisa K. Ford, Invent Your Image, and won by Jillian Graham, Warren Averett Pender Newkirk
- Gold Ring, donated by Gold & Diamond Source, and won by Kristi Campbell, Home Instead Senior Care
- Golf Outing, donated by Innisbrook Golf Resort, and won by Shirley Drake, Colonial Supplement Insurance Co.
